

TO LEARN A LANGUAGE

Is to open your eyes on a new and fascinating world.

It is to hear the music of a river which flows
with a varying rhythm.

It is to savour a variety of cultural traits
and be nourished by them.

It is to scent the fresh fragrance of an unknown flower.

To learn a language:

is to reach out your hand to touch new textures;
is to travel on charming and fascinating pathways;
is to warm your heart with captivating new knowledge.

To learn a language:

is to accept willingly an unfamiliar climate;
is to understand the worth of another human being
and to share it.

To learn a language:

is to find yourself enriched.

Shirley Kawahara